I don't blog: I brag, celebrate, and shamelessly advertise!!!

Welcome! to the director's cut version of my newsletter. TA-DA! You know, or should know by now, I'm dyslexic. No need to expect this to be letter perfect.

Freely share this newsletter link. If quoted, follow the conventions of professional conduct and good manners with proper citations. http://nadinelamanbooks.com/newsletter.html

Since this is a monthly newsletter there's a month's worth of links & other stuff in each issue. I know it takes time clicking all the links, but seriously, they're all there with you in mind. Don't ya feel special? You ARE special! Very special!

Writing News Briefs: All the comments regarding the title change for book three were in favor of the change to Storm Surge. Whew! That's a relief! Now back to edits and rewrites.

The rewrites are finally going normally. Honestly, I was beginning to wonder if I'd ever get back to being a writer. Sure, I will always be an author now that I have a couple of books published, but if one doesn't keep writing, that is as far as it goes. I really rather be a writer, if I had to chose between the two.

So what is normal for rewrites? Besides the obvious edit stuff, there is the odd things like... finding a place where the scene switches and it is quite obvious that Kathryn can't switch scenes without changing what she is wearing. It is an easy fix with a transition sentence. A piece of cake really. But, I had totally missed it, though it is as big as all outdoors now when I think about it. My beta readers missed it too, so I'm in good company. We have to keep plugging along.

At this point the word count for Storm Surge is 91,938. That is way too long for this genre. I cut over 5,000 words from the first three chapters—I'm just getting a good start on the rewrites again. Betcha readers had no idea how much is involved in getting a book into your hands.

Just a reminder Ann Zimmerman generously granted permission for use of her song, Absolute Zero, in High Tide. Listen to Absolute Zero on her website. www.annzimmerman.com/records.html Ann has three CDs out...ask her to sign them when you purchase them from her website.

What's Next? With me, one never knows, do they? (You have no idea how true this is!)

You guys crack me up. Lately there has been a flood of email about new discoveries on my website. Folks, that stuff has been there forever. Where ya been? Okay...this is just a warning, Joyce and I are planning changes for my site in the coming months, so get a good look at every nook and cranny. Some stuff is already removed. Go on...go look! www.NadineLamanBooks.com

In the that's enough about me department...let's celebrate each other!!!

As you will note, the format of the newsletter is changed. The YouTube clips have been moved to the books section. I think this format will make it easier to learn about the books that interest you. I encourage you to support these authors and their works.

In the this is really cool department:

This just about proves that anything is possible if you go for it.

Now a word from our shameless advertising dept: (That would be me.)

You can buy books anywhere ... internet, bookstore, wherever. The listed writers have signed copies of their book available. There is a huge variety listed, if you can't find something to read from this list, you simply aren't trying.

KATHRYN'S BEACH & HIGH TIDE are still available through the link at the bottom of every page of my website. My books were NOT affected by the changes at Amazon.

Free signed books drawing

Yes you read that correctly, free books autographed by the author. Drawing every month. This is a really great deal! Go check it out and enter now.

I get...the LAST WORD! (Naturally!)

You do know this stuff is only my opinion, however that doesn't mean I'm wrong. Does it?

Laurie (from work) and I were talking about analytical people and the prevalence of abstract reasoning in the general population (not as prevalent as one would think). The conversation continued in my head afterwards.

In general we are complacent creatures of habit. We take what comes, roll with the punches, and silently ask questions that should be raised. We deal with change as if it is an enemy to be feared. Well, I know that I do—at least some of the time.

I like things organized and predictable. My "line" is that I am this way because we had three kids in three years, and in that situation, one gets organized or dies. (Not actually dies, but you get the idea if you try to get three toddlers out the door to arrive somewhere on time.)

The rumors that Keri K. started that I alphabetize the medicine cabinet are exaggerated. Don't be silly, "like things" are grouped. I will admit to alphabetizing the DVDs (by title) and CDs (by artist). Otherwise, things are fairly normal here.

As a kid, I was told, "don't rock the boat." That isn't the best advice to give to a future social worker. Nearly everything I do professionally involves analyzing what is and proposing means of bring change to reach a goal. I rock the boat with questions others rather not hear.

Recently, Amazon rocked the indie book industry with new rules, (I'll paraphrase) use our printer or lose the buy button. The reaction among indie writers was fierce. The very nature of indie writers is to think outside the publishing norms that are over a hundred years old.

I've heard the largest indie publishing company ArthorHouse/iUniverse went along with the Amazon demans. Some companies, like little Infinity Publishing, had positioned themselves in better stead from the beginning and are immune to Amazon's new demands. (My books are with Infinity, so they still have a buy button.)

It seems to be a basic business decision for Amazon; the usual, I want more and I want some of what is yours too. Just in time to distract everyone, there is a new shipment of the Amazon Kindle reader.

So what does all this mean? It means if we sit around complacent and don't look to the future with an analytical glint in our eyes, someone will come along and change our world—and we might not even notice.

I'm sure most readers have no idea this is going on in the industry. Many authors don't pay attention either. Nevertheless, books will continue to emerge in one form or another.

I think it is important to support writers you like. I think books will have a shorter shelf life than before. I think more books will be available digitally, but not in print. So, if you are one of the purists who like the feel of a book in your hands and the security of a stack of books waiting to be read, better buy them when you see them, rather than wait until later.

Our human ability to take things for granted insulates us from loss, or so we think. I'm not sure that is a good thing. We ignore the business trends that affect our lives, the politics, the wars, the poverty, and occasionally notice too late the importance of the people in our lives.

Of course, this could be a get out and vote message. This could also mean, love the one you're with before you lose them. But, simply... in basic terms, it also means to support the arts. Don't wait to be given a free book then loan it to everyone you know. No writer can make a living on pathetic sales. One day, it maybe a day late and a dollar short to have what you treasure.

If you think there is a hidden message in this editorial, then you have paid attention. There are several messages here. Life is precious and fleeting. Don't take for granted that what you enjoy will always be there waiting. It won't unless you nurture it. I guarantee it.

Get off your butt and participate, evaluate, engage...and for heaven sake, if you love something or someone, ACT LIKE YOU MEAN IT.
